METAMORPOSIS OF TEACHING

by:
Nestle I. Reyes
Teacher III, Bepz Elementary School

Teaching, which is one of the oldest professions in the world, continuously evolves. It should be noted that just like a butterfly the teacher has become more beautiful and creative in the sense that execution of this job is truly artistically and meticulously done.

Teaching, as the prime source of knowledge, is now being delivered in different means or modes. From the traditional way, teaching has evolved. It is now using technology and varies strategies to make it interactive and be creative.

It is said that teaching is now synonymous to facilitating. Before the teacher was the center of the teaching-learning process. At present, the student is in the center of learning and the teacher acts as a facilitator.

Teaching may be the best form of mentoring. Teaching is not only confined during class hour but it goes beyond the time and teachers perform mentoring as part of the teaching job.

It is indeed true that teaching serves the true way for character formation. Through the ardent instruction being given by the teacher during and after teaching, the good character of each student is being formed.

Teaching is enhancing people’s skills. Through teaching the learners are able to develop, improve and enhance their skills and competencies. The teacher becomes instrumental in redefining the learner’s skill thus reaching its peak.
It is evident that teaching does not only focus on the teacher but consider the student as the focus of learning. With this, the student gets the best from the teacher and what he or she is doing would be for the benefit of each learner.

Teaching is the means to create more dynamic and independent people. With teaching, people become adept after being educated by the teacher. Through achieving the right learning, the confidence in being independent and active is established.

It is a mere fact that teaching is inspiring. Teachers serve as role models. The kind of actions that they emanate from teaching would inspire the students to learn and be better.

As time passed by, teaching was able to redefine itself and underwent a positive change… a metamorphosis.

References:

https://www.nfer.ac.uk/media/2115/rtc101.pdf