It is the patriotism, the courage, bravery, dedication and selflessness of our Filipino heroes like Gabriela Silang, Juan Luna, Marcelo H. del Pilar, Andres Bonifacio, Apolinario Mabini and Dr. Jose Rizal that gave conclusion to the slavery of the Filipino people from foreign conquerors. And these are some of remarkable names in the history of the Philippines that shed light on the attainment of our independence.

But it is necessary to die to be called a hero? Absolutely not! Anyone can be a hero in their own little ways, however, the way how our modern day heroes: the educators serve our country is indeed extraordinary.

Even before the unpredicted shift on the way we live because of the pandemic, educators especially in the less developed countries have been suffering from various challenges namely: the lack of learning tools and materials, accessibility of the learning institutions, attitudes of parents, guardians and students and, the availability of learning institutions.

But these challenges did not hinder but rather added fuel to the burning desire of the educators to provide the kind of education that will tickle the minds of the younger generation towards contributing change to the world.

And it is in no doubt why Voylla.com quoted that “a good teacher is like a candle, it consumes itself to give light to others” because of the dedication and perseverance of the educators to help with the development of every individual mentally, socially, emotionally and physically.
In addition to the knowledge that the books, modules and trainings offer, educators also go great lengths impart valuable life lessons to the learners that are significant to the ever changing and challenging world of professionals.

To our beloved educators who are selflessly and tirelessly dedicating themselves even in the midst of trials and uncertainties to help change the lives of many, you are truly our modern day heroes.
