MY TEACHER, MY EVERYDAY HERO

What does it take to be a hero?

Some say that anyone who has done something good is considered a hero. Others say a hero must be someone who has influenced you in many ways.

Merriam, on the other hand, defines “hero” as someone who is greatly admired for great acts or fine qualities.

But for me, a hero is someone who is willing to sacrifice in order to make a better person out of you every day. And that someone is none other than our teachers.

Despite the long hours of work, tight schedule and tons of paperwork, our teachers persevere just to ensure that we understand the world we live in, that we are equipped to face challenges and most of all, to make sure that we have a bright future ahead of us.

They told us the greatest stories that we know, taught us how to conquer numbers, helped us discover our talents and guided us as we took our first step towards our career path.

They planted the seed of knowledge in us and sometimes would go out of their way to ensure that we students grew in a healthy way.

And as I write this article, I also take this time to pay tribute to our dedicated teachers, our everyday heroes who have built this nation with courage, hope, and love. They who immensely helped in bringing the fullness of life to us through education.
