OUR GOLDEN LIFE

Time is gold, yet it never goes on sale. Thus, you cannot buy it. This is very evident in the Department of Education. It requires punctuality and efficiency. In short, one has to be productive at all times. Time is really precious and definitely treasured. It has to be saved and spent wisely. Thus, we are expected to maximize our time no matter how limited it may be. In the current time, as we all know, there are so many competencies that have to be taught not to add other matters that teachers have to attend to.

When I became a teacher, I must say, it always goes according to time. Every school year, we have to shift our lunch time depending on the lunch break given to us. Even the minutes we have to consume as we transfer from one room to another is timed. Similarly, we deliver our planned lessons according to the allotted class hour.

Truly, we are always on the go, but we never let time just pass us by. Thus, although we cannot buy time, I hope we can have a sense of fulfilment knowing that the time constraint became an opportunity for us to spend life meaningfully.
