PARENT AND TEACHER’S ATTACHMENT AN ACCESS TO A LEARNERS’ SUCCESS

by:
Sarah H. Layola
Master Teacher I, Palili Elementary School

Parents and Teachers Association (PTA) is created in school to build a rapport relationship between the teachers and parents. They have equal responsibilities in molding the students. Working hand in hand for the welfare of students education is their foremost duty.

Children are like blank papers when they first enter the school. They have no idea of what they are going to face in school. On the first weeks, some of them don’t want their mother to leave them in school. So many fears to overcome; different experiences, being apart from home, different persons to deal with, and new learning that the school offers to them. All these fears if not controlled and managed well will obstruct their chance to learn.

The first two weeks of school is the most doubtful time for some first time schooler. There’s a need for mutual understanding of parents and teachers until the children become used to enter the school. Parents are experiencing a hard time to leave their children in school during this time. Their children cry hard if they are left alone in school. This circumstance distracts the ongoing classes. Surely, it is hard for the teachers to manage the class. The parents should explain their children that parents are not allowed to stay inside their class and little by little parents should train their children to leave alone in the classroom until they are used to it. Understanding between the teacher and parents regarding this matter is essential.

It’s always been a problem of teachers the poor attendance of parents during their meetings. The fact that it is only in this time the parents can know the status of their children in the school. It is the best time that the teacher and parents can talk about how far their pupils achieve in school. If there’s a problem with the pupils, here they can make a compromise on how to help their children’s shortcomings in school. But the parents prefer not to appear in school for the entire school year. No matter what issues and problems arise they still hover away from school. They think that it is the sole responsibility of the teachers to mold their children. This wrong notion of some parents in attending the meeting makes their children lag behind. Teachers should also make an action for the parents to eliminate their thinking that the main purpose of a PTA meeting is to raise contributions. Instead let them be aware that this will be the right time for them to work together for the growth of their children in school.

Programs and project in school conducted by the teachers help the students grow and develop. There are programs and projects in school that needs the involvement of the parents.

Conducting these will only succeed if there is an equal efforts exerted by the parents and teacher. Focusing on the goal of these actions which is for the pupils’ sake and welfare will create harmonious relations between the parents and teachers. There are mediums that the parents can offer and to give their support to the school and to their child’s education as well. The teachers likewise should give their part to the parents for the good of the children. All this effort will surely give a great success on the education of the children.
References:

https://www.publicschoolreview.com