PARENT-TEACHERS COLLABORATION: AN IMPORTANT KEY FOR LEARNERS
Written by: Jocelyn P. Reyes
School Principal II

PARENT + TEACHERS = HIGHER PROBABILITY OF SUCCESS.
When you put two positive factors together, chances are, a higher level of learner and better quality of education will emerge. In the present education system, both parents and teachers contribute to the benefit of the learners.

For the parents, if they feel that they are valued and appreciated in school, they are more likely to get involved in school activities. If there are more parents who are willing to assist and support the school, other stakeholders will also be encouraged to contribute for the benefit of the pupils. If the parents feel that they are appreciated, it drives to continue supporting. This is beneficial for both teachers and parents. For teachers’ part, they are aware there is someone helping them achieve higher quality of education. For parents, they are aware of the policies being implemented so they know what is happening in school.

Meanwhile for the teachers’ part, it will be less taxing for them since they know that there is willing to assist them for the welfare of the students. It takes two to tango, as they say. It takes two efforts to attain success; that is (a). the contribution of the teachers to provide quality instruction and (b) the exertion of the parents to support the program of the success. With the help of the parents, teachers wouldn’t feel that they are alone, and their efforts are not in vain.

As for the pupils, they are the real winners here. They are the direct beneficiaries of the programs promulgated by the teachers and parents. With the efforts contributed by both teachers and parents, it is more likely that learners will achieve more and succeed.

Parent + Teachers = higher probability of success….
With teachers and parents working together, success is inevitable.

Source: www.readingrockets.org (Building Parent Teacher relationship)