PARENTAL INVOLVEMENT IN ACADEMIC SETTING

by:

Aimee I. Roque
Teacher-Applicant

What makes a school an effective learning environment is the cooperation of the parents in different aspects. Aside from being fathers and mothers at home, they allow themselves to be the guardian of all the students in school which is seen to be effective because the students will become eager to learn because they can see their parents inside the institution supporting them.

Researches shows that family engagement in school is really an advantage for a student to perform well not only academically but also in co-curricular activities such as sports, journalism, and other stuffs that can be an addition to their holistic development to become quality individuals. Other than that, they can learn to balance their time as long as their parents are there to guide them throughout their journey.

Studies also revealed that parental involvement in school does not only help their child to get high grades but also an improved behavior, reduced absenteeism, and a better social skill. Also, those who has two parents are more likely to enjoy school get higher grades since the students can see the both their parents are there to cheer them up to show support.

Socioeconomic status does not define the future of students. Financial capability nor the school is not the predictor of student’s achievement because learning starts at home so if they have a healthy relationship inside it that encourages them to learn, they can succeed with their desires. Also, it is the willingness of the students to learn and the effort of the parents to support them to whatever they want.
Parental involvement is truly important inside the school. But it should not exceed to the limit where the students will get spoiled that may lead to any form of unwanted behavior. Enough care, love, and support are good enough to perform their duties as guardians.

References:

https://www.teachthought.com/learning/the-effect-of-parental-involvement-on-academic-achievement/