PARENTS’ AND TEACHERS’ ROLE IN HELPING STUDENTS

by:
Ma.Corazon C. Sungcoco
Teacher I, San Ramon Elementary School

Online learning can be difficult especially to those who are not well-equipped of the necessities in being able to achieve desired results, but this does not necessarily mean that the other well-equipped students don't encounter problems as well. One of the prominent problems of some students is who will serve as their guide as they do their module particularly if both parents are working. Added to this are those whose parents or guardians are both illiterate, likewise with those who are not fortunate enough to avail of the different gadgets for them to utilize in the remote classes. Count as well are those parents who lost job due to the deadly COVID-19 virus. Some learners really lost their enthusiasm in learning. Particularly if the parents serve as front liners and lack supervision from elders. In unfortunate circumstances, some students end up only playing online games.

Kelly (2020) stated that there is a growing body of research that confirms parents’ and teachers’ critical roles in helping students succeed academically. Strong family engagement is central and not supplemental to promote children’s healthy intellectual, physical, and social-emotional development.

Now that we live in a world dealing with pandemic, there are a lot of uncertainties. A lot of students are maybe afraid or anxious on what might happen next. They tend to worry about their future. There are a lot of factors that affects one's interest in something so everyone must gain knowledge about how certain experiences leads to still learn and be able to surpass this trying times. With the guidance of teachers, school heads and responsible parents, students should be able to see the opportunities despite the many challenges brought by the pandemic. We all must stay healthy and safe as time goes by to be able to share the story in this history to the future generation.

References: