The success of the school does not only depend on the administration, teachers and other personnel but also in partnership with the stakeholders. They will serve as our support system in the community.

Having a partnership with stakeholders makes that school productive because there are people from different walks of life who support the school in various activities and projects. Whenever there is a school event these people are able to give assistance in any means and this is fruitful.

Building partnership with nearby agencies is also advantageous for the school. They can provide health and dental services for the children, feeding programs, repairs in school facilities, advocacy campaigns and other worthwhile activities which are all beneficial to the school.

Establishing partnership with the LGU’s or Local Government Units is beneficial. The barangay and the municipal government continuously support the vision, mission, goals and objectives of the support. They also extend help in the realization of the school drives, programs and projects. They even provide monetary assistance and rewards to the students if necessary.

Creating partnership with stakeholders like with parents is undeniably great for the mission to educate the schoolchildren may be done completely. These parents are in partnership with the teachers in molding and shaping the good future of the children.
The alumni of the school are also part of the stakeholders. Because they developed love for the school where they studied, the care and support to the school are planted in their hearts. They are of help to the school if their assistance is needed.

The partnership with the stakeholders is very valuable. It is a precious tie that bonds the school with the people who care for its welfare and betterment.

The stakeholders truly support the educational practices and even provide the needs of the school and its learners for them to be more productive in their school undertakings.

Let us involve our stakeholders in our school. They are the real school partners in raising the ideals of education.

We salute our partners. We salute the stakeholders of our school.
