POSITIVE STUDENT-TEACHER RELATIONSHIP

by:
Marites P. Tria
Teacher III, Orani North Elementary School

One of the factors that is being established in the school is the positive student-teacher relationship. This is very important because these two are the ones normally interacting every day in the classroom.

In the class, the teacher must set first the rules to be followed. In this way the student is made aware of the do’s and don’ts in the class. This may promote positive student-teacher since the students may know how to abide by the classroom rules.

Positive student-teacher relationship develops enthusiasm and passion on the part of the students gaining interest and perseverance on what they aim to have in the school. The students become more involved in school undertakings and are opted to perform well.

Good attitude among the students is also built one the true student-teacher relationship is established. The learner may know what appropriate attitude is expected in the classroom, in the school and in the society.

Learning is more fun if the teacher and student have a good professional relationship. Since the students know how to pay respect and since the teacher know fully the student then the teaching-learning process is enjoyable.
The teacher who treats the students well may gain better attendance and participation among them. These students are more inspired to go to school and to learn for they believe that teachers are friendly and approachable.

Good teacher-student relationship creates interest in the well-being of each other. The teacher may focus in enhancing the youth while the student may exert all the best in them.

A teacher who recognizes and respects the students may also gain the same. The reciprocal may be earned once good deeds are planted. The teachers who respect students are also well-respected.

Consequently, if the good relationship is established and strengthened between the teacher and student then good result is expected.

References: