PRODUCING WORLD-CLASS GRADUATES

by:
Olivia M. Buensuceso
Teacher III
Alikabok Elementary School
Orani, Bataan

Education is given to produce quality of teaching and learning and it is here to create world-class graduates. Great teachers may ostensibly produce world-class graduates.

The kind of school and the type of teacher determine the quality of graduates. It is imperative that we produce graduates that are not only locally competent but also globally competitive. It is the very reason why the curriculum was changed and the strategies were innovated. Producing world-class graduates is very possible and there are ways to attain it.

Generating world-class graduates entails the consideration of different key factors. Initially, the pupils must be provided with an ideal and conducive learning environment. This will be the place where they will build their solid academic foundation and where they would develop all of their potentialities, talents, skills and competencies.

Another important factor is the conformity to the prescribed curriculum contents. The curriculum was made to direct the teaching instructions and to intensify learning. The implementation of the most suitable strategies and positive learning experiences suffice the accomplishment of quality instructions and thus quality learners.

Another thing that should be taken into consideration is the application of the power of technology. Now that we are living our life to the fullest with the use of electronic gadgets, it is also better if we maximize the use of technology in the classroom. Since most of the transactions in our daily living are computer-generated, it is a need for our pupils to master the use of the software and hardware that comprise the computer technology.

Having a consistent interaction with parents is also essential in producing world-class graduates. This seems to inform the parents on the development and progress of their children. This is also a way of identifying their weaknesses and enriching their strengths as to become better.

Teachers should always be on guide to the learners in time of their difficulties and challenges. Assisting them all the way can make them resilient as in facing school and life tests or challenges.

These learners need the support of the government in their learning. Government support not only provides assistance but also adds confidence on the part of the students since they have a strong support system to lead them to betterment.

World-class graduates truly lies on varied factors and these are indeed contributory.

References: