PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT AMONG TEACHERS

by:

Maria Citadel S. Cantillas
Master Teacher I, Ipag Elementary School

A well-trained teacher is the greatest factor in predicting student achievement more than materials, written curriculum and even class size. Improving the expertise of a teacher results in extreme better advantage in student wisdom than do investments in tests, materials or program. Every single scheme to restructuring, reform or alter schools emphasize professional development as the primary vehicle in efforts to bring about needed change. To meet the goals of reform, teacher must make changes from the core each and learn. There are reasons why the department has insist that it is a key for mentors to be able to enhance and build their instructional knowledge.

Teachers should always remember a fact that teachers training cannot stop on their graduation on college. The school is the real course and field to apply what theories in baccalaureate may apply what a teacher learned. The knowledgeable instinct that teachers must know for a lifetime of teaching may not be learned during just a few years in college. Expressively fundamental and run-through the new trend in teaching and some of the most vital instructions can be learned only after they have their own students.

Negative point of view of many teachers in the professional development programs’ -those characterized by sustained, coherent study, collaborative learning. It’s respectable to give teachers the depth of information indispensable to bump into the student’s diverse and changing need.
References:

https://www.edutopia.org/teacher-development-research-keys-success
https://www.edweek.org/ew/issues/professional-development/index.html