It is said to be that leaders are born and made. Likewise, a person may be born a good teacher or may develop skills and abilities to become one. These qualities can develop or may be naturally part of their personality. Let us explore them further. A good teacher has an exemplar character. A teacher needs to be trusted and be known to live their life with honesty and integrity. In daily classroom routines, she upholds consistency or what we call “walks the talk.” A good teacher is enthusiastic. Pupils tend to respond lively to a teacher of passion and dedication. Teachers need to be able to be a source of inspiration and be a motivator. A good teacher is confident. A teacher who conveys confidence towards her lesson inspires the best effort from his pupils. Finally, a good teacher is committed to excellence. She maintains high standards and at the same time, she is proactive in raising the bar to achieve excellence in all areas. These are only some characteristics to be a good teacher. Some characteristics may be more naturally present in the personality of a teacher. However, each of these characteristics can also be enhanced, develop and strengthened as years passed by.
