Traditionally, we send our children to school to get them ready once they reached adulthood. Education is the very foundation of our whole career wherein we are being taught to handle problems and conflicts that we might have in the future. It gives us the idea of intaking knowledge which can be diverted into something better. It then helps us to build a more logical and reasonable opinion for a finer perspective in life. To say education is important is clearly an understatement. It is the supreme tool to improve one’s life.

Exactly 165 days, since we had this so-called pandemic “New Corona Virus Disease” also known as Covid 19. Upon the confirmatory of the first case, the virus then emerged to invade the people of this country, resulting to a more chaotic and unsystematic way of distributing orders, information and even personal necessities to its people. With this dilemma, complications within the sectors of economy and medicine arise. And one of the issues it tackles most is the upcoming school year. As soon as the outbreak was declared, students of all ages stopped going to class. All learning facilities, schools, and universities around the globe were shut down immediately and are still closed today.

But due to the fast modernization of technology, our local dignitary proposed the e-learning platforms wherein we do not need to be physical present when it comes to attending such class. Since we are living in a techier way, we can now somehow cope with the trouble this virus is causing our officials, teachers, parents and of course, the students. We are now promoting online or virtual classes conducted over the internet by the teacher together with his students in one picture. It is generally self-paced, allowing the student for greater flexibility in completing coursework. Electronic learning also prepares you to be more self-disciplined, independent with regards to decision making, and is very convenient. “The next generation are our future”, this phrase now serves to the reality of preparing our scholars to adapt firmly to the rapid changes happening around us. And if there will be a way to create similar opportunities for everyone, this initiative is a weapon for supporting students during this time of crisis.
