The corona-virus shows us how dreadful it is to waste our lives for wealth, status, and power. It is better to recognize the value of people around us - not just our family and friends but also other people not related to us. Preferably, it is significant to give our lives meaning - every hour of every day. Maybe by honoring the value of life and giving all living things the respect, sensitivity, and care that they deserved.

We are now in the midst of a trial that has changed our lives. Where people decide on whether to comply with government guidelines and whether to support one another in times of need. Everyone has a great responsibility for the health and well-being of others.

After several months of lockdown, wherein the government closed educational establishment in an attempt to stop the spread of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Department of Education uses adaptive learning methods to ensure continuity of education.

For many children, school is a safe sanctuary. Nevertheless, the COVID-19 pandemic is shifting learning from school to home setting. Because of this, we must give the importance of providing support to parents, elder siblings, and relatives in the effective implementation of adaptive or distance learning.

Let us all have the faith that the COVID-19 pandemic is not an obstruction in giving quality education and even the best future for our learners. We must make a conjoint effort to make sure that learners are not deprived of the basic right to learn and to be safe at the same time even in a household setting.
