REMEDIATION: BRIDGE OF HOPE

Not every student can work alongside on what you are teaching, whether the lesson is difficult or easy they cannot all grasp to it. It is because every student who passes through us has enough intelligence and skill. Each learner has its own differences. It's easy to understand, there's no. They have the ability and talent they possess. So, how can we address this problem? How can we help them?

One of the means we can provide is to conduct remedial activity or additional work for those who do not have enough skills and not competent during the class period or learning sessions.

Although, this can be seen as an additional work for both the teachers and the learners, it can be a great thing and opportunity to both of them. Together, we can help them pass. But by doing so we can give each of our student a chance to pursue and fill their shortcomings. Though it will consume our time and their time, giving them more lessons and activities will help them learn what they had to. Filling up what they had lost and cannot meet during the time of the discussion. In giving them task, we should also pay attention to each other's abilities. We also have the appropriate procedures that we will use and will work to meet them accordingly.

And by this, we can make all of our students to pass. As we teacher who considered a second parent in school, should give everything that we can to give and share what we have. Let our students see and feel we are behind them, providing support they need. If we want all of them to pass, we must learn the ability of every student we have; thus, we can understand them. We can help them accomplish the things that will benefit their ability and understanding. And this is something that should always be with us teachers as we approach each student in all our classes. The small amount of time we gave to this task and activity will make a big difference to our students. It can give them hope to continue their studies.

One important part of doing this is providing a little of your time. Just what they always said, “TIME is GOLD” as education is wealth to everyone who had a dream.
