SARCASTIC WORLD

by:
Cris Jay L. Laylo
Administrative Aide VI, Schools Division Office of Bataan

“Life is ironic. It takes sadness to know what happiness is. Some noise to appreciate silence and absence to value presence”.

Excerpt that is always forwarded in some of group messages in cellular phones. Line always posted in networking sites to explain the meaning of life, words that puzzle you at first but mainly brings out smile once you finally realize the true meaning of it. It is great to know this, to be informed about this but do you know anything about it? It is very idiomatic and ironic, and it is true that life is full of sarcasm and always will be. Indeed, every time.

Life is unfair but kindly think of this, if life is inequitable to all, then life isn’t unfair. Because all of us struggle and experience life’s biases, then life is fair, if life is unfair to you, to her, and to him, is there anyone who will claim his life as fair? We are living in the total derisive life that there is a need of irony to fully understand the way of living.

In love, we love someone who doesn’t even notice that we exist while we ignore those who truly love us the most. Why don’t we try to love someone with mutual feelings like of what we have so that we can avoid such life’s unfair mission?

In life, we always think that all of the people who did not achieve higher education are stupid, and worst can’t do anything valuable in this world while those who accomplish towering edification are intended to be respected and esteemed. In some cases, people with less education are humble and respectful than people who reached fame and success. But this is not intended to insult everybody, it only stands to awaken our minds that we need to have equal outlook on everyone so that we do not judge easily and regret it in the end.

There are times though when the ones who provoke sarcasm are our family and friends. Because they only want to give us light feeling and even be proud of ourselves even though it is not real. They use compliments even though they mean something opposite of what the truth is. You are beautiful today, the flattering remarks for anyone.

Cheers to life’s irony. If we will not appreciate it and see beyond of it, we will never be happy and we will never appreciate life.

References: