“No man is an island.” School will not be able to achieve its mission and vision without the cooperation of the community. School-community partnerships institutionalize leadership collaboratively and give remedies to problems to meet the cross-sector needs of schools and communities.

School-community partnership can be defined as shared responsibility wherein schools and other community agencies are involved towards the enhancement of students’ achievement level and developing the core values. As stated in our DEpEd mission, everyone of us, the students, teachers, administrators, staff, community family, and other stakeholders have their own role in our educational system. Meaning to say, that all of us must take initiative to support and participate actively to our children’s development and learning.

The focus of school a partnership is to create shared solutions to the problems arising in our educational system. All things are possible to happen if the partnership of school and community is very evident.

Increasingly, it is truly evident the school-community partnership nowadays is working hard to meet the needs and demands of our school children. Different organizations like PTA and the like were organized and LGUs were regularly giving their assistance for the improvement of the teaching instructions and other school facilities. Participation of volunteers during Brigada Eskwala is very evident that results to the increasing performance level of the students, maintaining cleanliness of school premises throughout the year, and preparation or readiness of school facilities before classes start. It is very imperative that the schools and community nowadays work collaboratively, comprehensively, and harmoniously.
Indeed, the success of the educational mission depends on the support of community human resources like the family members, LGUs, religious organizations, corporations, community-based organizations, public and private organizations, and other volunteers who are always willing to share their help and donations.

Spirit of volunteerism on the part of all the volunteers can solve the barriers in the educational system and enhance the effectiveness of the different school programs and activities to be implemented in every school.
