The names of Peter Drucker, Larry Bossidy, Ram Gharan, Herb Brown, H. Dale Bruske, Joseph Maciarillo, Kerk S. Astroth, Jeff Goodwind, Hidnet Frank, Dave Fleming, John C Maxwell, Colin Powell have something in common. They are the revered names in modern management.

They are in one saying that an organization can execute only if the leader’s heart and soul are immersed in the organization. The leader must be in-charge of getting things some by running the three core process picking other leaders, setting the strategies, decision and counting operations.

Another significant insight from these men is having a dialogue between the school manager as the subordinate. Dialogue is the use of culture and the basic unit of work, how people talk to each other absolutely determines how the organization will function.

Worth-Mentoring to a school manager is that in any organization, problem will arise when people are taken for granted. This just reminds us the value of wholesome relationship. Integrating within one’s system is not hard. Simply remember that every other person needs acceptance, approval and appreciation. And, instead of focusing on the good things that you may derive from the relationships, focus more on the people above material things. Let us all remember that in organization, human beings are its most reliable resource for generating excellent results year after year. Their judgements, experiences, and capabilities make the difference between success and failure.

Leaders are also known as delegator. Managers and leaders practice. Leadership by Delegation.” They are getting things done through others and this is fundamental. “Leadership skills leaders and managers who can’t work with others reduce capacities of their organization. They don’t get the full benefit of their peoples’ talents, and they waste everybody’s time including their own.
