“Where do values development come in Scouting?”

The main objective of Scouting has always been the development of character; the right values in the youth. Physical and skills development are necessary but they are only secondary to the development of right values.

Values Development is already in scouting from the very beginning. It is its very description, its objectives and principles. The three duties in Scouting, Duty to God and Country, Duty to others, and Duty to Self brings out the core values of Scouting: selfless service and sacrifice for the good of others... LOVE.

Drawing out what is intrinsically in the boys, encouraging, leading, role modeling, and repeatedly doing what the scout oath and law states until these becomes a habit, a part of them until it becomes a value that is difficult to break.

Scouting activities integrate values development through awareness of surroundings and beauty of nature, fun songs and games, group interaction and sharing, skills for creative expression.
Scouting strongly believes that right values must be developed in the boy before he starts out, while he is still young and receptive. Values Development counts in building character and making men... disciplined, responsible, interdependent, concerned, and selfless men of the future.

References:
Manual for Basic Training Course for Troop- 2011 Edition
Manual for Basic Training Course for KAWAN-2011 Edition