SURVIVING ROAD BATTLES

by:

Reygin S. Roque
Administrative Aide III, Bataan School of Fisheries

There has been a cliché reminder about drivers and it says: “Kahit gaano ka kaingat magdrive, kung ang makakasalamuha mo sa daan ay hindi, wala rin”. This saying has been my guide during the first few years of my driving career on the other hand, I have learnt to find out that the cautious mind that one has will really help a driver avoid accidents. Modesty aside, in my 12 years of driving experience as an employee I have not encountered any major accident on road.

According to Lee (2008) there are many factors that affect driving safely such as the driver’s age, experience, cell phone usage, and collision warnings. Moreover, it also stated that the human factors such as behavior is on top of the articles over the past 50 years. If you would be asking me, it is very necessary that a driver should always be levelheaded and calm irrespective of road battles such as heavy traffic, weather, and other factors.

Being proactive is also a significant weapon in safe road journeys for if one is always ready and attentive there will really be a smooth and sound road circulation. Some may think that being a driver is easy but come to think of it the preparation, the related skills, and a cool behavior make a total package for this work. These aspects make people appreciate and recognize all the drivers for bringing passengers safely to their destinations.

References: