One of the distinguishing attributes of a teacher is being devoted or committed. The devotion of a teacher is priceless for it shows his or her altruism and dedication to serve others most especially the learners.

The educator’s devotion or commitment to duties may be expressed and manifested in different ways:

The ardent fulfillment of the teaching profession entails the educator’s sincere commitment in performing the duties and responsibilities. It is one’s attitude toward the profession. It is the commitment to serve and to educate the learners, the school, the stakeholders and the community.

Often, the teacher’s devotion is on the education of the child. Considering the child as the center of the teaching-learning process and providing them with their educational needs constitute the roles of the teacher that require commitment and devotion. Thus, making the students as life-long learners would be possible.

The teachers are committed in serving the school. This pertains to rendering heartfelt services to the school and doing things for its welfare. The teachers continue to contribute for the school improvement and betterment. Spending extended times for productive activities in the school and raising the level of the school through quality teaching and coaching signify the commitment to it.
The teachers are also expressing the importance of the stakeholders as significant partners of the school. Because of this, the teachers are also committed to serve them and work with them in worthwhile school activities, programs and projects.

The duty to serve devotedly the outside community is also one of the concerns of teachers. There are times that teachers lead the community clean-up, beautification drive, catechism, teen information center and also the other activities, programs and projects of the Local Government Unit (LGU).

The teacher’s commitment to perform duties is evident and may be seen and felt within the school and external communities. Indeed, every teacher has the passion to commit oneself in the performance of duties for the benefit of others.
