TEACHER STUDENT INTERACTION

by:
Elena W. Roque

The role of teachers is fundamental in blending the needs of society and the needs of the student. In many ways, teachers are society ambassadors who are sent to prepare new citizens for their role in society. They need to be a welcoming force that encourages students to “buy-in” to the learning process and value the importance of education in the future of the individual. They need to be interpreters who help students understand the world and what the society expects from them. Educators become agents of change who plant the ideology of prosperous “dreams” deep within the soul of the students, and then encourage them to achieve goals and objectives in the pursuit of their dream, much like the “intuitional agents”. They are also advocates of the students. They need to understand the students, identify their learning styles, empower them to build their strengths and work with them to overcome their deficiencies.

References:

https://www.jstor.org/stable/1169735

https://www.apa.org/education/k12/relationships -“Improving Students' Relationships with Teachers to Provide Essential Supports for Learning” by Sara Rimm-Kaufman, PhD, and Lia Sandilos, PhD, University of Virginia