TEACHERS ADVANCEMENT TO GRADUATE SCHOOL

by:
Micha Ella M. Macaspac
Administrative Aide VI

Everyone is learning throughout their life, education is indeed a lifelong process. This true with today’s especially aggressive competitive employment wherein you want to upgrade your expertise and competencies each now and then. Even if you’ve simply graduated in university or are a person who has already been working for years now, having an intent for higher degree will assist you live in advance in life. Therefore, many professionals consider pursuing a graduate degree.

Although graduate school is expensive, teachers are enrolling to different programs of their choice because they think of getting a master’s degree is an investment. The amount of time, effort, and money the teachers putting into it, is it worth it?

Getting this degree provides teachers a more comprehensive knowledge and expertise in her field. They would also gain an advance and relevant techniques that they may use in their profession. This would also give them a wide career opportunity. Philippine public-school teachers for example may apply for a Master Teacher position once garnered a master’s degree that will give them a significantly higher salary pay. Having this increases your earning potential and can drastically increase your income. It also keeps teacher competitive because after pursuing master’s degree they can continue to a doctoral degree.

Higher degree will not only underline your academic excellence but also your desire for continuous education. This leaves employers a good impression because they will see you as a person with a strong personal development.
References: