TEACHERS AS POWERFUL AGENTS OF CHANGE

by:

Agnes M. Fajardo

Teacher III, Casupanan Elementary School

Teachers are the most acclaimed workers in the field of education for in their hands lie the future of the whole nation. From the teachers’ teachings are the stock knowledge inculcated in the minds of the learners and positive values caught. There’s an adage that says a teacher affects eternity and we can never tell where his influence stops. The teachers are the influential persons who could teach people on how to think, what to feel, how to decide and find best ways on how to resolve conflicts.

With the abrupt changes that the new administration had made from top to bottom up to the policies implemented to the people’s welfare and other incidents happening around, the way Filipinos accept changes are different in nature. If the history of Filipino people could be rewritten the other way around where the positive and good side of Filipinos would be featured the teachers would play a big major role. The teachings of teachers to their students at present could amend the past, nurture the present and touch the future.

Teachers are wonderful creations of the Supreme Being whose influence could be felt from the formal training that learners receive from the very first day they enrolled in school up to the time they finished schooling. Teachers are the co-builders of schools stakeholders greatest dreams for their children and increasingly becoming a dominant force in the delivery of educational and cultural transformation in a changing society. Teachers are the best people in job any nation could have for teachers are the powerful agents for change.
References: