TEACHING: A NOBLEST PROFESSION

by:

Ria O. Garcia
Teacher III, Pilar Elementary School

How noble it is to be a teacher? For being a teacher is not just a profession but a vocation, meaning it’s not about earnings that matter but this profession entails a lot of interest and appreciation towards your learners. It is proven that students are most affected by the quality of their teachers. (Peterson-De Luca, 2016) Not only do they interact with teachers every day in the classroom, but the quality of that interaction matters for our students’ future. You will never be a teacher if you don’t have a big heart and a wide understanding to a lot of things.

Being a teacher does not only mean teaching but more of imparting your knowledge mostly to those who are least or hard to teach. Not only imparting but also with the heart, it is more important of your concern with the student that is why you patiently and eagerly teach them.

Today it’s hard to know who the real and great teachers are. There are teachers who work only for money they love their work because of high salary. Being innovative is one of a great teacher should have, because the teacher become more effective, productive and efficient. The teacher will be able to learn a lot of ways and strategies in handling students. Next, they will be able to be knowledgeable and flexible as times goes by.

References: