TEACHING CAN SOMETIMES SEEM LIKE A THANKLESS CAREER

by:
Gregorio B. Castro
Master Teacher I, Bonifacio Camacho National High School

“The best way to learn is to teach”….. Spending half of my life in classroom is the best years of my life. My mirror image is a very important aspect of teaching and learning. Considering teaching as a profession, teachers should develop the skills to analyze the learning needs and styles through self-reflection and solicitation of feedback from others.

MAPEH teachers must have the skills to use tools and techniques for self-assessment such as portfolio and group study. Teachers must have collaborative strategies such as coaching and mentoring students.

Learning is a critical stage that takes time in the learning process. Sometimes it is very appointing, but realizing that failure is a natural part of developing skills, it will result to teachers fulfillment. In every subject, the acquisition of skills, understanding and continuous learning, needs different tools such as modern equipment and facilities which are appropriate in the adaptation of the lesson.

Have everyday learning plan, every notes and visual aids to track my students development and progress over time. Other techniques includes videotapes, instructional video materials, power point presentations, game puzzles and many more. To analyze my students performance. I give those examinations, common assessments and standardized test. I update my records as for my students’ quizzes, performance and etc. Periodic test and chapter tests were good indicators. If my students got failed scores, remedial teaching and exams were ready.
Being a teacher, I allowed my students to discover their own learning by discovering. I facilitate learning and conducive environment that allow my students to feel comfortable. I allow my learners to be challenged through various physical activities, games, recreation and etc. I encourage and push them to continue as more questions to satisfy their learning. I know my students may learn while enjoying at the same time.