Education plays an important role in man's life most especially to the youth. Educating the mind of an individual is one of the hardest tasks that the teacher can give. Everyone has the right to achieve and attain quality education. As time goes by there were lots of changes happened. There were some practices that teachers did not apply and use nowadays. Teachers have hard times in conveying knowledge to their learners in our modern times. There are lots of factors that really affect why learners are not willing to learn. They are focusing more on playing computer games and gadget. According to teachhub.com, as facilitators of learning, the 21st century educator should look forward to the future. They should be aware of the ever-changing trends in technology and should be in tune of what the future may bring to education.

A good 21st century teacher should be aware of the career opportunities that will be in the coming years for their learners, and they are always advocating towards forward thinking and planning to make sure that all learners will not be left behind. Moreover, the 21st century educator must use teaching strategies to ensure that the focus in education is on preparing today’s children for the future.
