A Self-Study was very in demand this time of the pandemic. It is becoming a familiar way to involve pupils with what they acquire in class. Not only in the class setting and having a face to face schooling, but learning can happen with varied access and resources anytime and anywhere.

What is self-study? It is a way of studying by oneself through learning materials without direct supervision or appearance in a typical classroom. Learners can be able to take command of what and how they are learning.

Here are some of the benefits of self-study for student:

a. Students learn more effectively – exploring lessons on their own could uplift your learners to engage in the information. To them, they will be able to reflect on the lessons more seriously and makes relation connecting what they are learning.

b. Students discover more about the topics they are studying – since self-study is also a self-discovery, it will give the learner opportunity to discover and learn more regarding the lessons.

c. It can boost learner self-esteem – it helps to develop confidence on the part of the students since they learn to do the task by themselves and without helping them. It moved them to become an independent one.

d. Students can learn at their own pace – since they learned to take the command in self-study, it helps reduce the feelings of boredom that the learners often experience in face to face schooling.
e. Encourages curiosity – to be able the learners motivate them in studying, first is to develop their sense of curiosity. In self-study, recognize to choose anything they are affected and thrilled to learn about it. It will guide them to experience more productive learning.

Learning takes place on how the student performed the task to learn. Self-studying needs a hundred percent of involvement that he/she will take all the benefits.

Thus, according to George Evans, “Every student can learn, just not on the same day, or in the same way.”
