“THE BEST LEGACY”

by:
Cynthia M. Quinto
Limay Elementary School

Oftentimes, teachers spend most of their time in school. Even during weekends, holidays, and vacations, teachers couldn’t escape from the reality that they carry their works and responsibilities even after school hours. Spending 6-8 hours in school and making tons of paper works at home are simply the life of a teacher. Because teachers tend to give all their time, effort and energy in fulfilling their duties as the giver of knowledge, they expect to produce better students. Teachers give their hundred percent for their students to learn and become productive citizens in the future. Teachers do care for their students even sometimes students and parents tend to disregard and disrespect them.

In this generation, where many of the students are no longer interested in learning, how could teachers be able to build better students who will continue their aspirations? How could a teacher help learners succeed in life? Is there hope for the students to become successful and be better? Could teachers continue building better society?

Producing better students requires a lot of sacrifices. As observe, a lot of students have depleting interest in education and they are becoming less focused. These learners need teachers’ helping hands. In the hands of their loving parents in school, they could somehow be improved and directed back to the right path. Through continuous support, students may progress over their academic career. With the help of a caring and dedicated teacher, one may improve within a course of time. Also, if the students feel the eagerness and concern of the teacher in teaching and guiding them, they may have guilt in doing unpleasant things. They could be more interested and curious to find out why their dear teachers keep on reminding them to strive harder and to continue their education. By making them feel loved and cared for, they will realize their importance and would be encouraged to better themselves. With this in mind, they will understand that the best mean to have better future is to accept the fact that education is the best way that could lead them to success. Knowledge and understanding of the importance of education and learning are the most important keys to building better students.
Publications

As a teacher one must believe in his/her students. There will always be those few students who may be too difficult to understand and reach, or those who don’t care at all. But these are the students who usually need more attention. They are the ones who want to know that there is someone who cares for them, someone who has faith that they are capable of doing something great. Believing that these students will succeed is like challenging them to be at their best. Also, teachers are the ones shaping their students’ characters and attitudes through instilling what is good and what is right. These might have started at home by their parents, and must be continued in school for enhancement. These actions help students to become successful and be better despite of hindrances.

Handling this generation of students is quite a challenge, but with God’s guidance, with our sincerity and concern to them we could help them build the strong pillars for their future.

Building a better student must be the teachers’ number one priority then everything good comes next. This is the true spine of a teacher’s accomplishment. Teachers must help each student attain his/her full potential for the betterment of his/her future. Being able to produce students who live their lives the best way and in the most productive means is the best achievement or better to say “The Best Legacy” a teacher could have.

References:

Teaching Strategies to Help Students Succeed

www.teachhub.com