Parents are the one trustable for providing the needs of their children particularly their children’s basic necessities. Parents are indeed the best mentor of their children, they give attention most of the time.

First, they are the one who taught their children talk in their early age. Mama and Papa were the first words to utter. It was also the moment where the child learned communicate and express what she or he feels about things around him or her. Second, they are also responsible for the loco motor development of their child’s body. The first two steps of their child for walking was facile because of the helping hand patience and enthusiasm given by them.

Third, parents are responsible for helping their child in their first day in school, they taught how to read the ABC, how to sing the different nursery rhymes, how to count and how to deal with his or her classmates and teachers.

Fourth, parents educate their children to show sympathy even in times of good and bad. They were reliable in molding their child’s character as well as sentiment in life, especially when adolescence period of their children approaching.

This is the best time for the parents to guide and help their children to build their character as the saying goes, “A child is the father to a man”. Starting that the parents character is very significant in molding the character of their child.
Last, parents teach their children to be a friend of God in their life, because Having God in life is very important and this will make us a better person. Parents teach a lot of things from the first step to walk, first word to say, first time to face challenges in life and develop love in their heart for having God in their life. Considering those stated details we can say that the best teacher in the world is our parents.
