THE IMPORTANCE OF POSITIVE TEACHER-STUDENT RELATIONSHIPS IN CLASSROOMS

by:
Melanie T. Tacaca
Teacher II, St. Francis Elementary School

Teachers often claim that today it is hard to reach out for their students, they view them as out of bounds, and hence students on the other hand claim it as teachers do not understand them this idea is very dangerous since conflict is exposed on both side. To dodge this impression, teacher should do their best to discredit this impression among each other.

Developing a positive relationship among learners and teachers has a significant and lifelong impact not just academically but as well as socially. Students will perform better if they feel that they are being valued and cared. Each individual needs be feel belonged and valued for.

To create good relationship among learners here are some things may help:

During the first day of class share your personal information in that sense they will feel you want to connect with them.

When handling a new class get students basic information probably from their previous teacher in that sense you can interact with them easily.

Engage in casual conversation in a few minutes before the class, such as about games, sports, movies and the likes, for them to slowly open up to you.

When have extra time try to attend to your students extracurricular activities, it is important to them for they will feel they matter to you.
Create a relax atmosphere by incorporating humor to your lesson.

It is very important that teachers create this positive relationship for teachers to be respected and be understood by the students, come up with best and most effective teaching methods, and on the part of the learners they will easily understood lessons and engage in the daily activities at school, it will surely improve their grades and performance. If the teacher invested in their students’ life, they will know if they came from hard life, they will know what they do not act normally and help them to adjust and act in accordance to norm, since they feel they are treasured.

It is significant for educators to know that there is more to students than their grades in class, and it is even more essential if the teachers exhibited interest in other aspects of the learners’ lives, separate the classroom.

References:
https://www.theeducator.com/blog/importance-positive-teacher-student-relationships-classrooms/