The use of computers nowadays is necessary. It can create documents and reports faster yet more efficient. It provides better audio visual materials that are necessary for learning. And most importantly, it provides information instantly from anywhere in the world.

Computer literacy is one important skill that everyone should be knowledgeable about. Teachers are expected to update themselves on the current trends in computer innovation. To do that is to make themselves adept with technological skills. It is essential that teachers who participate in educating the students must also equip themselves with skills necessary to respond to the needs of the students. If a teacher knows how to use the computer and the internet, the possibility of providing better education is enormous.

In general, the use of computers especially in the field of teaching is indispensable. As educators, we aim to help in developing our learners. And we cannot do that unless we develop ourselves as well. Consider the fact that we cannot give what we do not have. Let’s strive to be the best educators we can be by empowering ourselves in the use of computers.
