Why be a teacher? The answer is so simple:

• To observe the diversity of growth in young learners and the joy in learning.

• To motivate or encourage lifelong learning process both for yourself and for the learners.

• To experience the challenges of teaching and doing interesting or exciting activities for the learners.

Apparently, teaching is the most-admired profession. Congruent to this is the fact that being a teacher brings happiness and satisfaction to the one who is in it.

We couldn’t deny the reality that people regard teacher with much respect. Whenever someone finds out that a person is a teacher, he or she is revered and given much attention and importance. Isn’t it much rewarding that after sharing your knowledge and skills, you will achieve such elevation?

Another thing that satisfies a teacher is that you are always remembered by your students or pupils. Whenever a former student sees you, he cheerfully greets you because you were his teacher. During conversation with others, he mentions your name and cites your exceptional traits. A pupil is even proud of you because you were his teacher and because of your good deeds bestowed on him/her.
Moreover, teachers are the ones having many circles of friends. Since a teacher is exposed to the learners, to the school and to the entire community, he can easily deal with all kinds of people from all walks of life. In addition, teachers have flexible personalities that can easily adjust to the people around them. Furthermore, because of their experiences in teacher the young generation, they already know how to converse with them and to treat them with love or affection and respect.

As a teacher you will not be forever with your learners teaching instead your helping hands are always ready and ears open with the critical things or messages they want you to convey or know.

Being a teacher is a great experience. It is priceless and no amount of money can compensate on it. Our society truly considers teaching as the best profession and vocation.

Since the profession is considered a vocation and teaching is a continuous process it moves continually.
