THE MAKING OF A STUDENT LEADER

by:
Olivia M. Buensuceso
Teacher III
Alikabok Elementary School
Orani, Bataan

The children we have now will soon lead our nation so it is better to train them now as student-leader to prepare them for the future. Molding the soon-to-be leaders requires enough patience, ample knowledge and relevant skills.

To make a student-leader the teacher should train the students with the following conducts:

Instilling the love for service is one essential thing that should be imparted to a student who aims to be a leader. The heart to serve the people is very essential for it is needed in the advocacy of a true leader.

Developing leadership skill is the key factor to consider as to the shaping of the next leader. The ways and means to lead a group of people should be taught comprehensively. The art of managing people should be grasped by the student who aspires to be a leader.

Preparing the student for possible challenges is done in order to develop the resiliency and strength of the future leader. There are obstacles and distractions which hinder successful leadership that must be cited so as to make the student aware of the expected challenges in leadership.

Teaching a good example is one effective way on how to develop a student-leader. Having considered the great leaders that made history is worthy for the students may see people who raised heroic deeds and admirable accomplishments.
Involving the students in various community services is also causal to the shaping of a student-leader. This invigorates the student’s willingness to mingle with different people from all walks of life.

Forming a leader is one great responsible of the current leader. In school, the teachers are leaders in their own right hence they are creating future leaders not only in school but to be the leaders of the society in the future.

Leaders are first trained in the school before they become great!

References:

https://www.educationworld.com/tips-teaching-students-become-tomorrow%E2%80%99s-leaders