Before we knew the name of the COVID-19, webinars are existing already. Crawling over the shadows of the world of media, webinars are seminars or trainings that are done using different applications such as the Google Meet, Microsoft Teams, Zoom Application etc. neglecting the real face-to-face scenario. Like the other seminars before that is face-to-face, webinars have also their specific objectives, discussion or topic, time frame and evaluation. The webinars have the links made by the host of anyone who is able to generate the link. After the link has made, it will be sent to all of the participants in a specific webinar. The participant will just click the link they received before and the webinar will start. This process is very new to everyone that was attending the seminars. Before the pandemic, seminars are done inside the hotels, resort, or other school giving the participants the chance to travel in some other places, to benchmark, to gain more knowledge as well as to gain companionship. The face-to-face seminars before are represented by the webinars now with the same purpose whatever it is. Even the pandemic exists, the training of the workers specifically the teachers shall not be paused for a long period of time because when it happens, the professional growth would be stopped also by the pandemic which is not a good thing for the students as well as to the teachers.
