As what the old adage says, “You have to learn how to walk first before you run.” Planning is the roadmap to success, without an educational plan, the whole body of the school will suffer. Whenever an educational leader composes a plan, one must have certain and specific ideals in order to successfully orchestrate the said educational plan. At an equivalent time, it becomes clear what the longer term might hold and what your goals are. The goals, which has been decided by planning, makes the decision making more efficient and more particular.

This is because an educational leader knows how a decision will affect the plan in the long term. Furthermore, this decision will help the educational leader and stakeholders in achieving the planned goals all together with combined effort. Thus, it helps them to make accurate decisions without taking too much time. As time is one of the most important resources that humankind has, this should not be wasted with lapses that could have been prevented. The innovations and developments happening and therefore, increases the complexity of the educational system have made educational planning an absolute necessity.

These inevitable changes for growth and development places demands on the educational system. Hence, the educational system should be at par in order to meet the demands of 21st century for continuous learning under life skills, learning skills, and literacy skills. In line with that, the educational system must be able to meet these challenges whereas, planning becomes imperative and therefore the competence to plan becomes mandatory.
