Art includes different human accomplishments in the creation of graphic presentation of art works which express the artist’s creative, abstract and skills. The presentation is expected to be appreciated because of its beauty, meaning and power of emotion. Music, film, theatre and collaborative multimedia are included in a larger description of the arts.

Art refers to a talent or proficiency in aesthetic aspects which is not different from craftsmanship. Aesthetics is a division of philosophy where in the concepts of creativity and interpretation are being studied.

Studying arts in a classroom is a good avenue for the students to develop creativity, logical reasoning, and academic performance. Therefore, the inclusion of arts to the education system provides the students improvement in terms of personal, social and theoretical aspects. Arts assists students in obtaining not only skills in artistic discipline but also life skills that can be utilized for a longer period of time. It also encourages the improvement of the personal, social and studying skills with the application of definite artistic strategies. Students who are exposed to arts perform better compared to the students not included in an art class. Rotary learning is the term commonly used to describe the effect of arts in education, it means the student is performing well not only in arts-related subject but also to other learning areas as well.

Arts plays a vital role in making the students learn, its influence is immeasurable. It has a great influence for the students to success not only in school but also to their future working environment, therefore it is very essential for the students to obtain proficiency in art.

Students, who are exposed to arts education, are perceived to be self-driven and inspired to be the harshest critics of the result of their own effort. Students experience learning, become innovative, risk taker and may treat failure on its positive side.

Arts is also responsible in the development of good communication and expression of ideas presented. The students’ ability to produce ideas and communicate with other members is necessary for them to be good workers, thus this ability can be enhanced through exposure to the arts education.

Administrators and teachers must give importance to arts in education because just like other major subjects, it can contribute to the betterment of the performance of the students not only in the school but also to its workplace someday.
