THE TEACHERS AMIDST THE PANDEMIC

by:
Walter M. Bantay
Teacher III, Balsik National High School

How did the teachers feel amidst the pandemic as the teachers are bombarded with the need to continue with teaching? A modular approach is one of the best things we might consider. The problem is that the modular approach for some of the laboratory works become more complicated and intense. How can one install wiring and be checked if not done face to face, ah yes, online will always be the answer to that particular query. However most of the students are just using free load and messenger as their educational platform? The problem lies on things such as students with no load, checking of the video for the teachers, trying to avail the varieties of techniques using different platforms to be used to compensate with the face to face laboratory classes among the students availing the electricity installation.

Garcia (2020) had indicated that while this pandemic is actually happening, more of the efforts of the teachers are actually appreciated since even though they have their own issues and financial problems they are the ones doing all the works for the students and some co-teachers. While they lack the personal computers, their cellphone are smoking from the works they have to do. The department of Education is actually assisting the teachers, but because the pandemic is sudden and not planned the provisions for the teachers and the students are not given drastically. The dramatic changes in the educational setup will be highlighted in the upcoming months. With this what must the teachers do?
We as teachers, as front liners of education might use the modular approach and some educational platforms like Google apps, like Google Hangouts, Google Meet, and Google Classroom. Zoom may also be used. The Messenger Chat Room may also be identified. The key is to equip ourselves with those things to be done and assist our young ones and ourselves to become fully aware of the changes.

References:

Garcia, E. (2020). The pandemic sparked more appreciation for teachers, but will it give them a voice in education and their working conditions?.. Retrieved on September 2020 from https://www.epi.org/blog/the-pandemic-sparked-more-appreciation-for-teachers-but-will-it-give-them-a-voice-in-education-and-their-working-conditions/