“It takes in reality only one to make a quarrel. It is useless for the sheep to pass resolutions in favour of vegetarianism while the wolf remains of a different opinion.”

William Ralph Inge (1860 - 1954)

There is a new world now. All the prophecies laid in the fingerprint of the world’s humanity. These heights abound with rainy clouds and the depths are fathomed with dusts of the seafloor. The transition period from the old to the novel one has clearly portrayed various problems and along with these problems, daughter consequences arise.

The Department of Education (DepEd) attends all these concerns of the New Normal to adapt with the new frontiers, the New Normal.

Hybrid learning or blended learning, modular, on-off campus, and webinars among other methods of teaching will be hailed. Consider small private institutions, remote public schools, and schools that needs face-to-face instruction to assure quality and details of a work like engineering, medicine, and other related professions?

The survival of the fittest remain to be 19th century Darwin-coined term is still a 21st century acclamation. Another, the New Realities. Despite of the new things which are new – amidst novel episodes, strategies which are new to us, we must think again? What are new? What are old?

Teachers cannot be replaced by artificial intelligence and robots in the future because learning is not just a stupid science fiction thing where one absorbs information. Thus, robots cannot replace what human teacher can. This is an ultramodern idea, but we must get ready to other radical changes.
