Teacher III, Balon Elementary School

As a teacher, we always have the problem with comes in the discipline. We need some help with an expertise in the discipline in times that our students are hard to please to keep quiet. However, we need to be aware of the discipline that we are going to apply in our class. How to keep our pupils quiet? What are the things to make them quiet?

According to the website of teaching.monster.com. That teaching community are poorly managed in classrooms can waste the time and the lives of everyone involved.

Here are tips on how we can make them quiet

1. Take accountability

   Everything that goes on in the classroom is teacher’s fault. Good things happen because he/she sets up the expectations. Bad things that happen are because he/she allowed them to happen. Accepting responsibility will revolutionize everything that you do. Their culture like to deny responsibility much of the time. Do not allow pupils do deny responsibility, and do not allow yourself to do it either. Help them to accept responsibility and be responsible.

2. Establish tasks

   These must begin to be set up from the very beginning. How do you want the pupils to enter the classroom and perform every day the different tasks inside and outside the classroom? When do they get their instruments out and begin playing?
How do they go about asking a question? It is important to set classroom rules and regulations and introduce it to them at the beginning of the classes.

3. Identify authority
Every group of people will have a leader. Is it going to be you or is it going to be a twelve-year-old? Figure out who the leader is. How about, if you are not there? Who will be in-charge? The teacher personally like the idea of finding out who the oldest three students are, and making sure that everyone knows that when he/she is not there, the oldest student in the room is in charge. Usually, that is a substitute. Occasionally, he/she may need to go to the office to get something. In that case, the oldest one is the one who is in charge. Even if it is the kids who have failed two times, the responsibility will usually make them step up.

4. Avoid arguments
This applies to life. You will never win friends through arguments. Arguments never prove your point. Do not have them in your class, and especially not with a child. Remember that we must always respect the opinions of others.

5. Over-explain
While the teacher does not like the idea of talking too much, he/she also like the idea of giving complete information. He/ She plans to spend this year economizing his/her words and yet increasing their effectiveness. Be specific and clear in giving information to your pupils.

Let us remember that children at their elementary grades truly have some naughty attitude that we must consider and understand, make them busy doing useful things that can help them to learn so that they can minimize creating unnecessary noise. Try to emphasize that it is important to work quietly to make their work effectively.
