Teachers are not just persons who teach. They are the ones who play a vital role in the lives of their learners. They educate and shape the pupils that are placed under their care.

Teachers are the primary classroom managers, too. They are expected to create a classroom environment that would establish a good learning community for the pupils. Thus, teachers execute better classroom management strategies in order to ensure that learners are actively involving themselves into learning and behave properly.

Here are some classroom management tips to help teachers build a unique rapport between the learners and enhance their academic engagement.

1. GIVE A HEART TO YOUR PUPILS

Teachers should love their pupils and treat them as their own children. As their second parent, you have to make them feel that you care for them. In this way, it would be easier for you to inculcate them the right conduct which they are opt to show. Let them feel the sense of belongingness and impart them the unity inside the classroom.

By loving our pupils unconditionally, we let them see their true worth as integral part of the learning process.

2. REVEAL YOURSELF

Let the pupils know who you really are. Tell them stories about and your role in their lives. In this manner, you will be able to build trust among your pupils. A classroom where there is trust would be a great environment for learning.

3. LET THEM BE HEARD

Give students the freedom of expression. Let them express themselves in such a manner that it helps them enhance their learning capabilities. Let them speak and be heard. Allow them to feel that their thoughts and actions concerning their lessons are valuable. Let them share their ideas and feelings. In this way you can help them build their self-esteem.

4. SETS RULES AND REGULATIONS
Classroom should be a haven of learning and also fun and enjoyment for the learners. It would be easy for you and for your pupils to come up with a good classroom situation if there are rules and regulations set and followed.

Teachers should stressed the importance of having classroom rules and explain them the whys, pupils should follow these. Let them know the value of abiding rules and the consequences of not following them.

5. CLASSROOM CONFLICTS : ADDRESS QUICKLY AND WISELY

In some point, conflicts and other issues arise inside the classroom. They are normal situations because learners are individuals—they are different from one another.

As teachers, you should be prompt and wise in dealing with those conflicts. Always take positive approach. Be careful and act as you do care. Teachers should act as mediator and always take the neutral side.

Teachers play a wide array of roles. You are committed to impart knowledge, improve competence and strengthen the values of every pupil. By managing the classroom properly, achieving an ideal teaching-learning environment is not far behind.
