There is a saying, “we cannot please everybody.” Every individual has his own beliefs and opinions. Thus, not all people will say something nice to you all the time. In spite of doing good things and keeping on the right track, there will always be criticisms and unkind thoughts from others, and these could make or break us.

Sometimes, negative comments hit you hard and it can become the reason why you’re sad or feeling down. Let it hurt you and let it insult you, but only for a short time. Nor it should affect you for a long time. Instead of getting mad to those who say you can’t be successful someday, just stay nice and work in silence. Step by step, prove them wrong. Show them you can make it. As stated by Art Jonak, “Those who spend their time looking for the faults in others, usually spend no time to correct their own.” So instead of getting mad to those people who always find faults in you, make it a motivation to become a better person.

If you feel that you’re weak, you’re not enough, you can’t make it and you can’t reach it, stop! But only for a while. Continue, ponder and recall those who always say you can’t make it. Use this as your weapon. Weapon for motivation to continue doing your task until you reach the peak. Never stop, never give up. Do it prudently with no worries and hesitations. Failures are always part of our journey but this does not mean that this is the end. Life is not easy to live and not perfect. But to do what we believe is right and just in our own way will succour us endure the adversity of life.
Further, let us complement our undertaking with happiness, it helps. If we do things which make us happy the more we do well and assume that we won’t give up. But in spite of continuing our task with happiness, we will still hear opinions and meet hindrances along the way. Supplement with prayer. Prayer is another weapon to deal with the odds of life. It uplifts us and strengthens our soul. These additional weapons will not stop us from reaching our goals. Consider that once we quit, we satisfy others’ assertion. In the end, we lose and never gain any.

In life, our battle is between our faith and the faith of others. While others are busy finding faults in us, we must also keep ourselves busy discovering the greatness within us. As we come to discern our strengths and significance, we’ve won the battle against their faith. Hence, we’ve won because we believe in our faith and stood of our fortitude. In the end, we’ve succeeded because they pushed us to where we are now and with this, we thank them for making us conquer the battle of life’s struggles and say thank you because we survived! Lastly, to the people who always say you can’t make it, thank them. They are your greatest motivation to do it and prove them wrong.
