UNEXPECTEDLY

We always want the best. We always dream high. We plan for every action we take. When we were kids, we always wanted to be a teacher, a doctor, or an artist, and we idolized and inspired others to do the same. But is that really what we want? As the days go round, did your dream when you were young happen?

Sometimes not all that we want happen. Many factors can affect our decisions in life. When you dream of becoming a doctor but you realize you love to teach, you pursue becoming a teacher. The environment, life perspective, life status, and other advice may guide us to the pathway of life. We learn different things when we get old, we get to know different kinds of people. The one who can help us, or even the one who left us. Someone who can be present with us during your downfall and success.

There are some events in a person's life that we do not anticipate. We used to be able to travel freely, but now we can’t because of the world pandemic. Our loved ones now can no longer be with us, if they are far away or have passed away. Lots of things unexpectedly happen, things we didn't like before, we love it now. We hate those people, but in the end, they are the ones who can help us.

At this moment in our lives, we should appreciate little things because the best thing in life happens unexpectedly. The best adventure and story of life were never planned as they turned out to be. Let's free ourselves from expectations. The best will come when and when you least expect it. Patience is a virtue because the best things in life happen at the most unexpected times.
