The teacher has the significant role to motivate the students to learn and to excel in school. Being the most influential person in the life of every learner, the teacher is expected to employ possible and positive ways to motivate the learners. There are highly proven effective ways in motivating the students to learn and to soar higher in the field of education and these are also based on the previous and recent researches.

Be an exemplary model to students in terms of enthusiasm. The students would be motivated to learn more once they see good models. The teachers are their models in the field of education most especially in the interest and passion to study.

Introduce novel techniques of doing things. The students are motivated when new things are being taught to them. Fresh ideas are indeed appealing to them to help them in their studies.

Expose students to various active activities. This is very interesting among the students. They truly enjoy varied undertakings wherein they show their skills and talents. Portraying different roles in the school activities is also motivating.

Help them set individual goals. Instructing the students to have their respective goals to achieve is amazing. This is also helping them to obtain accomplishments in the school.

Give them rewards in their accomplishments. The students like to receive rewards in the best things that they did. They really feel happiness and satisfaction if the teachers recognize them.
Express praises and suggestions. Aside from rewards, the good words from the teacher praising their outstanding deeds are also considered as heartfelt. The brilliant suggestions of teachers make the students grow. Encourage growth mind set. The students are well-motivated if they are trained to be productive particularly in their studies. They are being stimulated to be at their very best as students and as individuals in the society. Create a healthy and meaningful relationship with the students. The students are much motivated if they have a good working relationship with their teachers. The teachers should make them feel that they are very important.

Motivating the students to learn better and to be more fruitful in the school is truly meaningful and commendable. The teachers have the great responsibility in the realization of this heroic action.
