Teachers are said to be the second parents in the school but there are teachers who are truly loved because of their exemplified attributes and character. The following are the characteristics of a teacher that is well-loved by the students:

Always smiling. The smile of a teacher magnetizes the attention of the learners. By having sunshine on the face makes a teacher blooms like a flower and this catches the attention, respect and love of the students.

Stays considerate. Students remember that considerate teachers. These teachers show understanding on the difficult situations that student have. Being considerate is also showing understanding to the thoughts, sentiments, opinions and suggestions of the students.

Remains compassionate. The compassion is truly recognized not only by the students but also by the others stakeholders as well. Showing kindness specifically to those students who are facing challenges and difficulties in the school is endearing.

Always caring. The students easily notice the teachers who are caring. Care is a universal language that is associated with love. If teachers are caring, similarly they also love and with this they will receive the same love that they deserve.
Teaches very well. The teachers who teach well are loved by the students. Because the students feel that they receive what are ought to them, as a return they bring will bring back the love and respect to their teachers.

Being supportive. There are times that the students seek for the support of their teachers whether in their quest for knowledge or in their personal life. Students love the support that their teacher provides in any situation they are into.

Stays energetic. The teachers who are full of energy and vibrancy win the admiration of the learners. Students are influenced and affected on the way their teachers act. Thus, the energy of the teacher inspires them.

Emanates respect. The teacher who shows respect to everyone is well-loved and praised simply because people see the good character within the teacher. Being respectful is also admirable.

These are just few of the attributes of a well-loved teacher and these should be noted.
