"WHAT MAKES A GOOD LEADER"

by:
Ma. Cristina B. Gueco
Administrative Assistant I

Leadership is a process by which a person influences others to accomplish an objective and direct the organization in a way that makes it more cohesive and coherent.

Leaders have a great impact in the achievement of the organization's objectives. That is why, leaders are being cared of. They are rewarded for the hardships that they contribute. Each one of us has a potential to become a good leader because good leaders are not born but they are made. Experience helps develop leadership. One should not take work problems as a hindrance but a challenge to become a leader. A good leader is a good follower. Having confidence in workplace is not enough to become a good leader; a good leader knows how to follow rules and handles his subordinates. There should be a two way communication between a superior and his subordinates. Both parties should listen to each other’s opinion. In a government, an effective leader listens to the needs of his fellowmen. He takes active part in the decision making especially when it involves and affects his people. Leaders in financial area of government have different responsibilities and follow certain rules and regulations to effectively and efficiency manages the resources of the government. Rules and procedures were followed to maintain the accuracy and reliability of the data provided by the unit. Treasury Officers secure the income collection. Budget Officers allocate funds to meet the needs of the society. Accounting officers account the receipts and disbursements to maintain transparency.
Leader or not, we should have our initiative to do what is right. Regardless of the rewards to be given, we should always think what is best for others rather than personal interest. We are hired to achieve the goals of the organization, not to compete to anyone. Just follow rules and do your job.

References:

http://www.nwlink.com/~donclark/leader/leadcon.html