WHAT NEEDS TO BE DIFFERENT?

Marcy C. Caron
Teacher III, Batangas II Elementary School

At the end of the first school year, amidst the pandemic, we were able to take a moment to reflect on how the experience has gone and what we can do more for the next.

Last year’s accomplishments made us reassess what we need to accept and adjust towards a better new normal. Successful implementation of all the imperatives in the education field can become real only through multiple learning pathways and with the use and integration of technology in education. Redesign the strategies used in the last school year and focus more on the students’ condition than the learning outcome. With these, it will be more effective than targeting your visions and goals toward teaching and learning. Make a plan that will be achievable and focus more on their strengths and weaknesses like reading ability and numeracy.

In giving assessments to the learners, different strategies should be more interactive and enjoyable learning for them. It is necessary to design, select, organize, and utilize evaluation for the learners in different ways. It will surely give an attainable learning output that will not be burdensome to the learners and learning facilitators.

We must consider LDM2 Practicum Portfolio as a path walk of every teacher in this “New Normal” journey. There are different ways teachers can pass through, but it is best to be guided and mirrored all the endeavors so that little by little can have a smooth and perfectly accomplished task given and obliged as a call of duty. It is our way of assessing and evaluating things we do for the school year. The life that we knew is far different now. We need to cope and adapt to the “new normal” culture.
We must bear in our minds that despite all the struggles that we have because of our present situation, education must continue, and learning must never stop. We will find ways to give to our learners what they deserve to get from us, teachers. Give what they deserve means we should equip and be “new battle” ready. The struggle is real, but we must believe that we can make the next school year better. Knowing that we are guided, protected as well as enhanced professionally and technically.

We should be happy enough for all our achievements and be proud that we can face the challenges and experienced a different kind of school year far from what we imagined. We are so blessed to fulfill our duties for this pandemic physically, emotionally, and spiritually healthy. It’s a different environment that needs to be different.

References:
https://blog.socialstudies.com/teaching-during-a-pandemic-a-personal-reflection