WINNING THE HEARTS OF LEARNERS

by:

Anna Liza R. Libao
Master Teacher I, Orani South Elementary School

Several people say that the students nowadays are too preoccupied with gadgets, computer games and social media. So, to win them back to educational aspirations, the teacher has to make ways in catching their full attention.

Making the school learning experiences more dynamic, interesting and amazing would entice the students to learn. To win their hearts the teacher has to provide activities that are inviting at the same time educational. Children love to move and let them perform artistically, creatively and actively.

The teacher has to give leadership opportunities to the children. Once they socialize and mingle with their peers that is the time that they enjoy being in school. You can easily win their interest if they feel that they are important.

Providing them with learning materials aided by technology is a better attraction. Since these are the things that they are fond with, then learning would easily take place. Technology is catchy and at the same time instructional.

Exposing them to activities that test their critical thinking is a better practice to win the students’ attention. Children’s inquisitiveness and critical thinking are stimulated and the learners are motivated to think beyond the box.
Getting the children be involved in community affairs is also very essential in winning their hearts. They would definitely have chances to interact with other members of society and they learn from the real world.

Have them be engaged in sports. This activates their physical strengths and leads to vitality and physical stamina. It also yields enjoyment as to practice skills and develop sportsmanship.

Have students collaborate ideas with their peers. Sharing ideas with one another is fun and is a great experience. This intellectual practice is indeed commendable.

Winning the hearts of our learners is possible if we only work together in accomplishing this task which is merely for their sake.

Young people deserve the best of education!

References: