Education plays a vital role in the foundation of one’s future. As Doctor Jose Rizal said, “the youths are the hopes of our nation”. This realization inspires us, educators to continue the learning process. Though we are on the midst of this COVID 19 pandemic still the Department of Education had designed and created different platforms in order to make education possible for all. The formulation of Learning Continuity Plan paved to the way that Education may continue.

In view of this present situation, we are still on process of adopting the so called New Normal. The Learning Delivery Modalities (LDM) are really suggested to studying now in order to prepare every learners as well as the teachers this coming school year 2020 – 2021, which is scheduled on October 5 this year. The implementation of LDM in every school now has a great impact on the teaching – learning process.

Where a school-based, Face to face Learning is not possible, the LCP had identified three learning modalities namely; Distance Learning, Blended Learning, and Homeschooling. All this three modalities are designed in order that education be possible to everyone.

Remember that our Children are in our hands, the hands of society is not just the school in this New Normal Scheme. Among us public school it’s quite difficult if online learning is to be used as platform. That is why modular learning is much applicable. Wherein without the connectivity of internet it will be impossible to have the Distance Learning approach.
Private schools on the other hand can have the Blended Learning Approach. They can have the zoom sessions or detailed discussions among their students. They can even send worksheets or modules to students.

In short whatever modalities is to be used among the schools whether private or public, what is really important is that We shall Win this War. And we can only do it together.
